is made final." The announcement caused a profound sensation, and was followed by a stormy debate. M. Chamegoor, of the right center, denounced the votes of yesterday as communistic revenge, and warned the deputies that it was leading the country to an abyes. He declared that he and his friends would oppose the third reading of the bill as amended.

An amendment, offered by M. Bardoux, of the left, providing that each department elect three senators, was adopted. This was incorporated with the amendment of yesterday, which provided that senators should be chosen by the same electors as the deputies, and the entire amendment was then adopted as a substitute for the first clause of the bill by a vote of three hundred and Morgan coilege. The senste then took eighty yeas to two hundred and fiftyup Mr. Logan's bill to reduce official three nays. The remainder of the bill, including the amendments introduced by the left defining the qualifications of persons eligible to senatorship, was adopted clause by clause. A motion was then made to proceed to the third reading of the bill. This was State constitutions. As the adoption of rejected, on a division of the house, by a vote of 345 yeas to 357 nays. The bill is therefore defeated.

M. Brisson, of the extreme left, declared that the assembly had proved itself powerless, and moved that elections for a new assembly be held on the eighth of April, 1875. M. Waddington, of the left-center, argued that the last vote had only defeated one of the many plans for organ-izing a senate, and he introduced a bill which provides for the appointment of senators by the assembly. M. Vantrain, conservative republican, submitted a bill proposing the elec-tion of senators by a method similar to Grant's Last Message Regarded by Thoughtful Men as the First Gun of a New and Alarming Policy.

What Attorney-General Williams Said-The President's Policy in Two

Lights-May and February. Washington, Tuesday, February 9, 1875.—The President's message on Arkansas is universelly considered by thoughtful men in Washington as one of the most important documents he has ever sent to congress. It is the first gun of a new and most alarming policy. In explaining to a friend to-day the occasion of this message, General Grant said, that while in terms it referred to Arkansas alone, it had, in his opinion, been made necessary by information he had received from other parts of the south, which fully convinced him of the purpose of the white people of the States which the Republicans still retain power to overthrow the reconstruction those constitutions was essentially the condition on which the southern States were readmitted into the Union, the President believes that it is the duty of congress to make provision in advance to meet these grave issues as they arise. In other words, the President seems to think that it is the duty of congress to prevent by positive laws any material changes in the constitutions of the reconstructed States, and he hints that if the legislative branch of the govern-ment does not do this he shall. He still pleads his desire to be relieved from all responsibility in the matter, but says he shall act in accordance with his understanding of his duty in case he has no specific instructions from congress. The friends of Governor Brooks claim to A te isters held themselves responsible for his information is that if the United States government fails to take notice Mahan through General de Cissey. Thus far the President has absolutely refused to recognize Mr. Garland as governor of Arkansas, and the latter has resorted to several expedients to secure recognition. After various attempts had failed, he made a requisition upon the secretary of war for the quota of arms to which Arkansas was entitled. No attention was paid to this requisition, and Governor Garland was not even notified that it
